Milestone 0

Description: Joe Biden loves ice cream, and so do we. We are creating a web app for an ice cream store. On the app, customers will be welcomed by a customized message at the landing page, and then will be able to see the stock of different ice cream flavors. On the main page, the ice cream store employees will be able to select a login button which will take them to the login page. They will be able to login and then be taken to another page where they can add or remove stock from the different types of ice creams, and then set up a custom message on the home page.

We will have two separate tables in our database. The first table will be to store the different types of ice creams and their current quantity in stock. The second table will contain the login information for the admins- the usernames and corresponding passwords.

The conditional rendering portion of the project will be when the ice creams and their stocks are displayed on the main page. If the stock for an ice cream is 0, then the ice cream will not be displayed, otherwise the ice cream and its quantity will be displayed on the page.
